GUIDELINES FOR ALLOWABLE STANDARDS

Mirror is a man-made product, both the glass and silvering. Because of the glass being silvered, it magnifies even the tiniest of imperfections. Most cannot be seen at less than a 30-degree angle or from more than three to four feet away. This has become the acceptable standard of measurement for minute imperfections in the mirror.

An important consideration for wall-to-wall mirrors is the allowance for motion in the walls. The walls do expand, contract, and vibrate with weather conditions. Due to this, a max of 1/16" allowance is made where mirror joins and up to 5/32" at the ceiling and corners. For insets, the edge of a radius top or special pattern cut should allow up to 3/16" between the mirror and wall. This allows for wall motion and permits the installer to make the installation without damage to the mirror or sidewalls.

We stand behind our products and installation standards at M&M Glass Company. We work hard to make sure you never need replacement of a product and your satisfaction and expectations are met.
